EDITOR'S NOTES

EVENTS OF NOTE: Congolese history during the past three months can only be described as kaleidoscopic. During that time a United Nations peace force was established and its interpretation of Security Council policy disputed; strong tribal and economic desire for a confederation destroyed the centralized organization of the country; and rivalry for political leadership fostered the foundation of two governments simultaneously competing for recognition and control. Since the situation in the Congo remains unclear, ALMANAC has listed those personalities who have been contending for power as well as those who now appear to be in control . . . (Note that our listings for the sake of clarity differentiate between the two Republics of Congo by identifying one as the "Congo" at Leopoldville—and the other as the "Republic of Congo" at Brazzaville) . . . With the promulgation of its new constitution, Czechoslovakia advanced from the People's Democracy stage of governmental development to become the second major Socialist Republic in the world . . . Despite the fact that the Dominican Republic gained a new president in August, Generalissimo Rafael Leonidas Trujillo maintains his "moral role as political leader and guide of the Dominican people" . . . The French Community saw a number of its members attain independence during the past quarter. The period was marred, however, by the secession of wealthy Senegal from the Mali Federation; poorer but more populous Sudan claimed such a move was illegal. The collapse of the Federation was confirmed, nevertheless, when Sudan (now Mali) and Senegal qualified separately for UN membership. A struggle for leadership, lingering national jealousies, and an unbalanced economy were in part responsible for the Federation's end . . . Laos was again swept into turmoil when Paratroop Captain Kong Le successfully overthrew the recently formed Somsanith government in order to press for a neutralist position in international affairs . . . Reports now indicate that the Vatican's Secretary of State has remained in office despite his earlier request to retire . . .

EVENTS TO WATCH: The major candidates contesting the Brazilian election are Marshal Teixeira Lott (PSD-PTB) and Janio

Quadros (UDN); in the United States, Senator John F. Kennedy (DP) is now running against Vice President Richard M. Nixon (R). In a third significant election, the Union of South Africa is conducting a referendum on the issue of transforming that state into a republic . . . Council of the Entente members and Mali will negotiate their relationship with the French community in the near future . . . Although no date has been set for another try at conducting acceptable elections, the new Iranian government has principally committed itself to this end . . . Africa's grave problems do not end with the Congo and the Senegal-Sudan controversy. Mauritania has been promised independence despite the fact that Morocco claims the territory is as Moroccan as New York is American . . . On the brighter side of African events, the world welcomes Nigeria as an independent state on October 1. Nigeria, soon to assume its international responsibilities as a member of the UN and the Commonwealth of Nations, will enter our listings in January.

INTERNATIONAL NEWS: To protest against the Declaration of San Jose, the Foreign Ministers of Peru and Venezuela resigned their posts, reportedly unable to accept the implied criticism of Cuba . . . The new Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development has chosen Thoric Kristensen to be its Secretary General . . . Rayeshwar Dayal was selected to succeed Dr. Ralph Bunche as the UN Secretary General's personal representative in the Congo. General Carl von Horn continues as the Commander in Chief of the UN forces there . . . While ALMANAC lists Permanent UN Representatives, note that the chairman of a delegation is usually the highest political official present in New York.

FACTS OF INTEREST: When Henry Cabot Lodge left the UN to become the Republican nominee for Vice President in the United States, it brought to mind others who have left the UN to participate in their country's politics; Abba Eban is now Israel's Minister of Education; Ismail bin Dato Abdul Rahman, Minister of National Security in Malaya; and Iraq's Hashim Jawad holds both the foreign and finance portfolios in his country . . . The influence of women on the conduct of international relations is not new, but Mrs. Bandaranaike's selection as Premier of Ceylon serves to emphasize their growing significance in this field. Note that both Israel and Sweden have prominent women diplomats listed in ALMANAC.
